

Objective

To deliver total returns in line with the Consumer Prices Index over the recommended minimum time horizon of 5+ years.

The fund will seek to achieve its objective by investing at least 70% in collective investment vehicles, a greater proportion of which will be allocated to defensive assets (such as fixed interest and cash) than to growth assets (such as equities).

Commentary

Yields rallied towards the end of May as the prospect of US rate cuts was extensively talked down by policymakers. Forthcoming economic data releases could alter this "higher for longer" narrative if consumer activity slows or inflation continues to soften as we expect but for now, the economy seems to be in robust shape with no obvious signs of an impending recession. Trump's conviction in his New York trial generated many headlines, but whether it has a material impact on his election campaign remains to be seen. In Europe, recent inflation data came in slightly hotter than expected, raising significant doubts over any subsequent rate cuts given inflation remains well above the 2% inflation target, despite the commitment from the ECB to cut at their June meeting. In the UK, electioneering began after Sunak called for a snap election despite recent polling results. Both parties seem to be leaning towards soft fiscal policies with the Conservatives promising tax cuts, while Labour plans to increase spending. However, current fiscal constraints may limit these promises, posing ongoing risks of a repeat of the mini banking crisis in 2022. As we push into the second half of the year, the elections and policies from the Government and Central Banks will likely continue to heavily influence markets, with geopolitics adding an element of tail risk concerns despite the small probability.
