

Objective

To deliver high levels of capital growth in excess of the Consumer Prices Index over the recommended minimum time horizon of 10+ years.

The Fund will seek to achieve its objective by investing at least 70% in collective investment vehicles, a greater proportion of which will be allocated to growth assets (such as equities) than to defensive assets (such as fixed interest and cash).

Commentary

With no major developments, yields saw a minimal change in June, though a surge in the well-known tech names did push some equity indices to new highs. Recent softer inflation prints were welcome news, but the likelihood of rate cuts remained broadly unchanged as Central Banks await further confirmation. The US election race remains somewhat close, but Trump likely gained a further edge due to Biden's weaker performance during the televised debate. In Europe, attention is on the first round of the French election given a victory for the National Rally party will likely introduce some market volatility. However, the key is that fiscal easing appears inevitable, which could support economic growth but will constrain the European Central Bank's path going forward. In Japan, the Yen continued to depreciate to new lows prompting discussions about potential intervention, though historically, such measures has only offered temporary relief. This adds pressure on the Bank of Japan leading up to their July meeting to adopt a more hawkish stance which could include an additional 25bps rate hike alongside the already announced significant reduction in government bond buying. Looking ahead, European markets will likely dominate the headlines in July as the French election unfolds but also given that the upcoming UK election appears to be Labours to lose.
